Delivering safe water for communities

Consistent water quality and safety is essential to our lives, as a community, and as a country. Yet achieving compliance is becoming increasingly challenging.

It's easy for utilities, councils, and authorities to lose sight of the bigger picture, to be overwhelmed by the compounding details: the regulations, the reporting requirements, and the complexities. A depth of expertise is critical.

For over 30 years, TRILITY has been an industry leader in the delivery of water and wastewater services in Australia and New Zealand. This expertise lies in its team of engineers and scientists who have extensive hands-on experience and knowledge of drinking water, wastewater, recycled water, and biosolids, treatment and processes, regulation, compliance, and risk management. In addition, by collaborating with utilities, councils, and authorities, the company can further share its expertise through its niche water consultancy services.

"At TRILITY Water Consultancy Services, we apply our operational expertise to ensure our clients can support consistent and sustained operations that meet Australian regulatory standards and public health standards," explains Dr. Emily Quek, Water Quality Manager AUS/NZ at TRILITY.

The company has collaborated with many regional and remote councils that don't have the internal expertise or resources to maintain pace with ever-evolving guidelines and compliance requirements. They review the council's operation, the condition of their assets, analyse historical water quality data, and work with the council to develop management plans.

Dr. Quek comments, "We are committed to helping our clients deliver their responsibility: safe, reliable water for our communities."
