Recently, TRILITY was awarded the water services facilities contract with Central Otago District Council (CODC) on the South Island of New Zealand. The contract is for the operations, maintenance, and management of asset renewals for 15 water and wastewater treatment plants, as well as associated intakes, outfalls, raw water mains, reservoirs, pump stations, and rising mains, on behalf of CODC.

This collaborative contract aims to manage the facilities to deliver services to CODC's customers safely and efficiently. In collaboration with the Council and CODC's other appointed contractors, TRILITY will manage the facilities' compliance within the increasingly complex regulatory environment for drinking water compliance and wastewater treatment. The TRILITY team will work with the CODC team to enhance asset and maintenance planning to ensure the long-term sustainability of the assets and value for CODC's customers. The contract will further strengthen the delivery of essential water services across Central Otago and its communities.

TRILITY's Managing Director Francois Gouws said, "This is a very exciting contract for TRILITY. We are excited to build a relationship with a new client in a vibrant and beautiful region of New Zealand at an important time in the evolution of water services for the district. We are frontline operators at our core, and by securing this contract, we not only broaden our footprint within New Zealand; we also expand our operations expertise."
